on the reform for another year there is need ed an appropriation of $250,000. It is dis-ble that the appropriation should be in such language as to put on the shoulders of the the people whether it be the intention of Congress to allow the new system a full and fair trial. In addition to their increased prestige and vigor which are unmistakable endorsements by Congress would appear the new system in the eyes of the people. President's Message of Dec. 22, 1912, to secure the direct action of Congress is rendered the enforcement of the system based upon my (his) successor. The same letter expresses our conviction that in adopting this language of the highest order, and by the people of the United States, and by the people, founded in the highest, and the best interests of the country, which demands reform in the Government, and the elevation and purification of the Civil Service of the Government, and a better ers" in that year the people of Hindale were suddenly alarmed by a loud noise, resembling the report of a cannon, proceeding from the mountain. One of the inhabitants,

A Mr. Barrett, went to investigate, and found a hole formed through the side of the mountain near the top—of only, he thought, by the action of internal fire. The hole was about six inches in diameter. A tree trunk which stood near it was in a great measure covered by a black mineral substance, laid down violently out of the hole, and consisting chiefly of melted and calcined iron ore, strongly resembling the scorification of iron ore.

"It was forced out the side partially, and driven with such force against the tree as not to be separated without difficulty. The tree stood several years afterward, but was cut down and carried away before we visited the place. The trunk and all the remaining sustenance were, however, still adhering to the rocks and earth in several places, and could not be broken off without

A comparison of this blackish brown clay with the blackish brown clay in Haywards's "Gazetteer of New England," in which it is said that there was, at the time the book was published, a considerable quan-

It is impossible that the noise in the G-dok's well could be the rumble of Rip Van Winkle was taken to be the rumbling of ten guns. Any form of noise to have been caused by volcanic action, it is surely worth investigation. What State will put in the next claim to a volcano?

It is not likely that the threat of M. Lesseps to prevent navigation of the Suez Canal by diminishing the pilots and extinguishing the lights in the lighthouses, will be carried out. The interests of the maritime power and of civilization itself will not permit such an act, and the strong feeling that it is the khedive of Egypt who is needed to prevent the disagreement between M. Lesseps and the International Commission in reference to
